From Cornucopia to Famine: Sustenance, abstinence and nutrition in the Early Modern Hispanic world.

Early Modern imperial Spain fluctuates from cornucopia to famine, and is not far from voluntary starvation, compulsive eating, and recipe experimentation. Submissions are welcome on these topics (ingredients, substances, use and abuse, non-use, compulsions, recipes, formulas), and related issues.

Please, send conference proposals, in English or Spanish, by June 15th, 2011, to Elena del Río Parra, Rio@gsu.edu.
